

Statement on Business Continuity Plans

As a trusted supplier, DuPont Nutrition & Health (DuPont N&H) recognizes the importance of ensuring operational integrity and continuity of supply in the event of a disruption in supply capabilities or a crisis situation. In DuPont N&H we have documented procedures and a Crisis Management Plan in place to assist in ensuring continued operations during these types of situations.

A multi-functional Crisis Management Team (CMT) exists and will be activated to address specific crisis events. The CMT is responsible for managing any crisis situation and maintaining critical business functions. DuPont N&H also has a flexible and global manufacturing base that helps to assure continuity of supply.

DuPont N&H continues to refine and exercise its business continuity planning processes in an effort to minimize business and customer disruptions.

Aspects of our Continuity Plan include:

- For most stock keeping units DuPont N&H maintains a buffer stock of inventory to allow for deviation in supply/demand. While no company can assure supply under all circumstances, DuPont has a robust crisis response process in place with the aim to assure continuity of supply.
- Most of products from DuPont N&H can be manufactured at multiple DuPont N&H facilities or approved contract manufactures across regions. The global distribution of DuPont N&H's facilities provides further assurance of supply, as even regional events can be circumvented.
- For most raw materials DuPont maintains a number of suppliers across various regions that can provide redundancy in the event of a supply interruption from a single source. Certain specialized raw materials and certain recently established materials have limited supply options. Whenever feasible DuPont N&H maintains an inventory buffer to allow for deviation in supply.

DuPont N&H's information systems are protected through the use of a third party Disaster Recovery Provider for all critical systems including an alternative location for our key functions such as customer service.
